

5-MINUTE

GIVE-UP-GOOD-TO-GET-TO-GREAT PLAN

It is difficult to abandon what's comfortable and relatively good to become uncomfortable in the hopes of becoming great. It may feel like stepping off a cliff. Yet often, that's what it takes. As leaders, we have to find ways to help others push beyond their comfort zones.

Status quo is a comfortable place. We know what we need to do to be fairly successful. We may be comfortable in our jobs, confident in what we know, and performing well.

But the world is changing quickly. Businesses that do not continually improve will wind up stagnating and become obsolete, like the 8-track tape player.

We have to give up good to get to great. That means as leaders, we have to help others explore options and take risks. We have to give up what is merely good today to achieve greatness in the future.

Who or what is holding me back from my full potential?

Who: _____

What: _____

Why is it challenging to get rid of the issues, situations, or people who are holding me back?

Are these obstacles speed bumps or mountains?

Obstacle	Speed Bump or Mountain
_____	_____
_____	_____
_____	_____
_____	_____
_____	_____

What do I need to stop doing, because I am holding me back?

1. _____
2. _____
3. _____
4. _____

What does my "GREAT" look like?

